Gowns Worn by Miss Virginia Harned Masterpieces of the Modiste's Art

Unusual Interest Will Be Manifested at the Belasco Next Week.

Gorgeous Creations Made Under Personal Supervision of the Actress.

The appearance of Miss Virginia Harned and her company in Victorien Sar-dou's "The Love Letter," at the Belasco Theater is of especial interest to women because of the fact that the women in the piece are stunningly gowned-and in spite of the fact that St. Paul declared her hair to be "the glory of women," the fact remains that in this day of sartorial accomplishment the glery of woman, strictly from the woman's standpoint, is her attire.
All the gowns are striking, but among them are two worn by Miss Harned her-self—and considering the fact that the action of the play is within the twentyfour hour limit, two gowns are enough. Judged by the masculine idea of econ omy, and by the cost of the gowns worn by Miss Harned, they are one and a half too many, at the very lowest cal-

Sure to Excite Interest.

The gowns of Miss Harned are certain to excite unusual interest from the very fact that they are unusual gowns.

The first is a pelquoir of white chiffon, embossed with hydrangias in the pink and mauve effects. The flowers are woven into the chiffon, and are of raised velves with woven into the chiffon, and are of raised velvet, while the delicate shadings are all painted in by hand. It is the empire style of gown, "which is fashion's decree of the moment," and is worn ever and under an empire petticoat of the softest, palest pink liberty satin. The foot trimming consist of yards of delicate lace in shades corresponding with the hydrangias. Altogether, the creation is a fairy like dream of beauty, distinguished by the most finished at-

The second gown is a carriage robe. mony with the story of the play at that point. It is of the palest blue cloth, while soutache embroidery trims it. It is in the princess style, with the inevita-ble empire back, while the bodice and ble empire back, while the bodice and slever are of white lace and silver embroidery. A chic little garment, so thy that it seems absurd to call it a coat, completes the gown, and to top it all Miss. Harned wears a gorgeous picture hat in black.

In working out the details the creator of the costume surpassed himself, and in its totality it would be impossible to surpass the costume for the quintessence of good taste and form.

Personally Supervises Making.

The charm of both gowns lies in the fact, that, while they are necessarily elaborate-supposedly, in the play, the harness of a woman of unlimited wealth harness of a woman of unlimited wealth and exquisite taste—they are at the same time so tasty, and so deliciously refined in conception, that nothing of gaudiness is suggested, and there is nothing loud or crass in the least detail.

This point Miss Harned personally insisted upon, herself supervising the building of the costumes from first to last, by critical examination of the designs and material.

SONG OF AN ORIENTAL THEME. 'Aime, reve, et desire."-Henry Cazalis.

All is false; yet love! Love dream and desire. Bare thy throat, bare thy heart, To the knife, to the fire.

All is lies: yet believe! Love, desire and dream. Spend thy life for the love Of the things that seem.

Women to Meet, Planning Gifts For Christmas

In order that the usual confusion at tending the selection of Christmas gifts may not be noted this year the Young Women's Christian Association has de cided to form a "Christmas class" for the purpose of arranging a number of novel little gifts. Meetings will be held every Wednesday evening, beginning November 14, in the association's rooms, Twelfth and F streets northwest, and ne's mind, but it is the most difficult one's mind, but it is the most difficult thing in the world to think up something that has not been generously exploited in the shops or has not found a place in the calculations of former CERISTMAS seasons. There are people in the world who have ideas in their heads about such things and members of the association determined to form a class with the hope that each one would bring to the attention of the class at least one good idea that could be worked out. It might be something in embroidery, a little knickknack cleverly contrived or some other novelty which will offer its recipient a bit of freshness.

The meetings will be held at 7:30 o'clock, and it is not necessary for those who join the class to be members of the association.

Many a room that might have been charming is rulned by an overplus of decoration and furniture. Pictures are so crowded upon the walls that the individuality of each is lost, and you are merely conscious of a mingling of frames and a glare of color. Bricabrac is crammed upon mantelpiece and cabinets until they resemble nothing so much as the show cases in shops. Chairs and tables press against each other until crossing the room is a perilous feat; and the owner of this conglomeration gazes upon it with an air of resignation and wonders why her rooms have not the street, who does not spend one-tenth as much in the course of a year upon her house.

A few chairs, selected with an eye to amfort and arranged so that their very tititude is an unspoken invitation to ome and rest a while, are in far better aste than innumerable spindle-leg and over-carved affairs, which are always avoided by the wary guest. Pictures selected to give pleasure to the people who look at them, and not because of the magnificence of their frames, and hung with regard to their possibilities, add far more to the beauty of a room than the attempt at an imitation of an art gallery, which some persons seem to affect.
